STATRAD APPOINTS NEW DIRECTOR OF BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT

Premier teleradiology provider hires seasoned sales specialist for new growth opportunities

SAN DIEGO – (April 25, 2011) — StatRad, a leading provider of premier, around-the-clock teleradiology solutions, today announces the appointment of Kevin Stinson as director of business development. Stinson's will oversee new business endeavors and market share growth.

"Everyone at StatRad is looking forward to working alongside and learning from Kevin," said Joe Mook, managing partner of StatRad. "His robust knowledge and experience surrounding sales team development and sales initiatives are something we will all undoubtedly benefit from. We are confident Kevin will endorse our mission and ideologies when working with current and potential clients. "

With 17 years of sales experience, Stinson will add immeasurable value to StatRad's new business efforts, help increase market share, while simultaneously forming long-lasting, mutually beneficial partnerships between the company, local radiology groups and their corresponding facilities. Exuding a deep passion for sales team development, Stinson has flourished in creating high-powered sales teams for numerous companies both national and international. Most recently, Stinson served as the vice president of sales for New Paradigm Sales Group, a provider of training and outsourcing solutions. Prior to that, he was partner of Donavon Mobile Solutions, a mobile technology company specializing in the development of financial transaction systems.

"I am honored to join a company that operates with unwavering integrity and develops such impactful solutions for the healthcare industry," said Stinson. "StatRad has always stayed true to its roots by upholding the traditional teleradiology model, which is something that is unique in today's market. As more providers transition to business models that promote the seizing of whole-hospital contracts, StatRad remains focused on working with, not against, radiologists to reach a common goal of improved patient care."

While StatRad has provided teleradiology coverage since 1995, it is the recent development of predatory practices by large teleradiology companies that has truly allowed the company and its services to stand out. Its forward-thinking software and workflow solutions are quickly adopted by clients and allow them to effectively compete in today's challenging healthcare environment. As a premier teleradiology provider, StatRad helps clients save money, achieve efficiencies, satisfy hospital clients and maintain control.

StatRad's reputation of excellence began in California, but the company now provides state-of-the-art teleradiology solutions to facilities throughout the United States and continues to establish valuable partnerships and penetrate new markets daily.
